

A Day in the Life Project By Gabe Short

Our setting is a nice, small town. Tommy, our protagonist, is in the second grade this year, however he is being bullied by the big mean, snott-nosed Charley. Charley sits behind Tommy on the school bus. This story will include both scenes at school and on the school bus.

We open with the preliminary situation, where we meet the protagonist, Tommy, waiting for the bus on his first day of second grade. The initial incident occurs when the older 4th grade bully and our antagonist, Charley tells Tommy that he can only sit in the bus seat for a fee. Rising action occurs later in the day when Charley trips Tommy "accidentally" in the hall. Charley is minority punished for this incident. The climax occurs when Charley confronts Tommy in the little boys room. He is upset that he got in trouble and blames Tommy for his misfortune. What will happen next? The principal walks to do his business but instead walks in to see Charley about to throw a punch at Tommy. Falling action occurs when Charley is sent to the principals office. Conclusion: Charley is punished and Tommy is unharmed.

In conclusion, Charley is punished and learns a lesson not to bully because he is bigger as well as not to blame others for his own misdoings. Tommy learned that sometimes you are blamed for things that you have no control over. In the end, all works out.
